

David Oliver

Associate

Mr. Oliver has spent over two and a half decades working across various areas of the California energy landscape.

Immediately before joining Caliber, Mr. Oliver worked as a Senior Analyst at the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC), helping to develop policies and provide oversight on Community Choice Aggregators (CCAs). Prior to the CPUC, he worked as a Managing Consultant at Guidehouse (formerly Navigant Consulting) for thirteen years. Mr. Oliver helped clients understand and navigate the California Independent System Operator's (CAISO) planning and market development activities, and provided analysis and expertise for wholesale transmission markets across the United States.

Mr. Oliver also spent eleven years working at Southern California Edison (SCE), developing and supporting procurement activities for the utility. This activity spanned a variety of issue areas including helping to establish policies and procedures stemming from the 2000 energy crisis to implementing Renewable Portfolio Standard policies.

Mr. Oliver has a Bachelor of Arts Degree from the University of Wisconsin – Madison in Economics and International Relations and a Master's Degree from the University of Rochester in Economics.
